Chamber will call it quits if county doesn't increase grant

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The Chamber of Commerce could cease operations in two weeks unless the County is willing to change its contribution to the organization.

Chamber members hope they can convince the County to either increase its grant or remove restrictions on how the money can be spent.

In the 1991 budget, passed last month, County Council approved a grant of $32,700 to the Chamber, a decrease of more than 50 per cent from 1990. Council also directed the money towards specific Chamber activities, such as event development, advertising and participation in certain trade shows.

But Chamber vice-president Anne Larcade says unless the organization is given the freedom to spend the money as it sees fit, a shortage of money will force a suspension of operations.

In order to address the budget crisis, an emergency meeting of Chamber members has been called for tomorrow (Tuesday). The board of directors is planning to present the members with a number of resolutions to determine how the Chamber should proceed.

County releases draft official plan terms of reference

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The Haliburton County planning department has released the draft Terms of Reference for the County Official plan.

The document outlines the process for developing the official plan, and the issues that will be addressed.

The aims of the county official plan, according to the terms of reference, will be; to interpret provincial concerns and policies and how they effect Haliburton County; to establish broad policies for matters of county significance; and to establish "umbrella" policies that will coordinate implementation by the individual municipalities.

The issues which will take priority during the development of the county official plan include waste management, urban and rural growth, a balance between development and the environment, identifying new areas for development, affordable housing, wetlands and flood plains, and water quality.

These issues will be used as a starting point for discussion between the county and municipalities to determine the more specific policies of the official plan.

The official plan will be prepared in two phases. The first phase will address priority county and provincial issues and concerns.

Phase two will deal with more detailed, and less urgent, aspects of the official plan and allow for more detailed mapping and information.

The break between the two phases will provide an opportunity to address changes that may result from possible county restructuring, such as amalgamation of municipalities.

County council has opted for a two-tier structure to the official plan, which will consist of a broad, county-wide document as well as more specific official plans for each of the 10 municipalities.

Only Cardiff, Dysart and Anson, Hindon and Minden currently have their own official plans. The other seven municipalities will be able to use the policies of the county official plan until their own plans are completed and adopted.

The county official plan will take into account the results of the Waste Management Master Plan currently underway in the county.

If the locations of new county landfill sites are not approved by the time the first phase of the official plan is

Sir Sandford college offers variety of courses

'It's a constant struggle to financially justify any class,' says Haliburton campus principal Barb Bolin

by Susan Grober

Most know the local campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College for its fine arts program.

But the school also offers a wide-variety of courses in continuing education and development of skills which help people enter the job-force, Principal Barb Bolin told the college board of governors last Wednesday at a meeting held at the Norman A. Sisco Centre.

The Haliburton campus has offered continuing education courses for the past 20 years. This year, 2,076 students attended credit courses and 930 attended non-credit workshops, seminars or courses.

"These classes are run in many locations in the county — sort of wherever 10 or more are gathered — but most are in Minden and Haliburton," said Bolin.

Continuing education courses are the most consistent link the campus has with the community.

"However, because of the small numbers that register in any class, it's a constant struggle to financially justify many courses," said Bolin.

Bolin said low registration is due to area population, as well as facility and equipment restrictions.

So a health course would have low registration because the community health population is small, she said. A computer lab course would be low, because only 15 computers are available.

Continuing education is funded on a significantly different funding formula than post secondary, said Bolin.

"And factor in the problem that we are lucky to have one teacher in either of these areas who is qualified to teach."

There is a high demand for the computer course, said Bolin. "Our computer lab is full, night and day."

Couple this with the hours per week required in programs such as a health care aide course, and it pushes the teacher into a partial load category. Such faculty rates have significantly increased, she said.

"This leaves us with the dilemma of community demand and need, and financial viability."

Bolin is excited about an addition to the continuing education program this year, where courses and workshops are offered in co-operation with Romni Wools on Queen Street in Toronto.

"These classes offer our summer students in the area an opportunity to develop their skills further, and us the possibility of coming in contact with new students who, hopefully, will become summer school students as well," she said.

The program has been moderately successful so far, but Bolin expects to get a better picture after another year.

Career opportunities

Over the past year, the campus has offered 14 projects sponsored by the Haliburton County Employment Centre and the Community Industrial Training Committee (CITC).

About 160 students attended employment centre-sponsored projects, which included a masonry pre-apprentice program, a commercial refresher course, and a 20-week horticulture program which is the in-school portion of the apprenticeship program.

In another program, five new students each month are guided through an assessment of their existing skills, and take a realistic look at their abilities. The idea is to choose a plan of action toward a new vocation, or go back to school to upgrade toward their goal.

The campus also offers a job development program for about 30 students each year. This program is divided into four equal parts: life skills, job skills in office and computer training, academic upgrading, and job placements.

"This program has been extremely successful and, during the past year, three students have continued their studies at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Peterborough," said Bolin.

Industrial training

This past year, the CITC sponsored a 25-week social services assistant program.

The program was made up of 10 students, whose goals were to work with such programs as the Association for Community Living, Parent Support, or the Board of Education.

The placement rate for both programs

Back to school

The Sir Sandford Fleming College board of governors meeting held at Haliburton's Norman A. Sisco Centre last Wednesday was topped off with wine, cheese and chatter. Here Principal Barb Bolin of Haliburton campus chats with Andy Campbell of the Haliburton County Development Corporation, left, and Sir Sandford Fleming President Brian Desbiens.

was about 70 per cent.

Another new addition this year sponsored by the employment centre, the WOW program, targets those in the 14-16 age group who are early school leavers.

Along with a work placement, students benefit from individual and group life skills classes, "with the objective of seeing the young person return to school or further their training through an alternative method."

Programs sponsored by the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission amounted to about $650,000, said Bolin.

The Bancroft/Haliburton CITC contributed another $110,000 to the Haliburton campus this year.

Bolin said the CITC offered five programs, training 60 students in oil burner, baking, blueprint reading, sheet metal, computer skills and carpentry.

Upgrading and job placements

Since June, a pilot Ontario Basic Skills Program has been run at the campus, and Bolin is now awaiting word whether a full year of funding will be approved.

This program offers upgrading in academics, and runs two mornings and two evenings a week, accommodating about 20 students.

Currently, there is a waiting list of 15 for this program, "which shows the need in this area," said Bolin.

The final program run from the campus outside the continuing education area is Futures, which places 50 people in the 16-24 year age range into 16-week job placements throughout the county.

The programs are housed in rental spaces all over Haliburton Village, and other areas in the county.

Minden Fire Department aims to raise $20,000 to purchase 'Jaws of Life'

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The Minden Fire Department has started a fundraising campaign to raise money to purchase a set of 'Jaws of Life'.

The hydraulic cutting equipment is used to free people trapped in vehicles involved in accidents.

The department is hoping to raise $20,000 by the beginning of July, through donations from service clubs, businesses, residents and fundraising activities. Donations boxes will be established at Dollo's IGA, Home Hardware, Kawartha Dairy and Valumart.

The Jaws are similar to the sets that are kept in Stanhope and Haliburton Village, but are lighter and less cumbersome, says Minden Fire chief Don Booth.

Having the Jaws of Life will save fire fighters crucial time when trying to extricate injured people from cars.

Currently Minden firefighters have to call either the Stanhope or Dysart department for the equipment when responding to a vehicle accident, says Bill Hogg.

"In a vehicle accident, the vital time is the first hour," says Hogg. "Right now, even if we arrive at the scene within 15 minutes, we might still have to wait another 20 minutes for the Jaws to arrive."

Without any equipment, firefighters have to use hacksaws and come-alongs to free trapped victims.

The Minden Volunteer Firefighters' Association kicked off the fundraising campaign by donating $2,000 from money raised through previous events.

A special dance is being held on June 22 to support the effort and the Jaws will be on display at that time.

The municipality has set up a special fund to administer donations and tax receipts will be available from the township office. Cheques should be made out to Anson, Hindon and Minden Fire Department Jaws of Life.

A board has been erected outside the fire hall to keep track of the progress, and each week The Times will run an updated total as well as listing the names of people contributing to the fund.

If you wish more information, you can call Wayne Dickerson at 286-2177, Jay Garbutt at 286-1843 or the municipal office at 286-1260.

Doug Ripley, left, got the Jaws of Life fundraising campaign rolling last week when he presented Don Booth and Bill Hogg with a cheque for $2,000 from the Minden Volunteer Firefighters' Association. The fire department is hoping to raise $20,000 by the beginning of July.

Chamber members will address budget crisis at meeting

Among the options being presented is a proposal to the County that the Chamber's 1991 budget request of $73,500 be granted with the understanding that the county's contribution to the Chamber be reduced by $10,000 a year to allow the organization to become self-sufficient within seven years.

Other resolutions being presented are;
*That the county rescind the restrictions placed on the grant to allow flexibility with how the money is spent,
*That the Chamber approach the individual municipalities to try and secure additional funding,
*If spending restrictions are not rescinded, that the Chamber temporarily suspend operations and re-consider the organization's future and,

*That fees paid by the members are doubled to help make up the shortfall in the budget.

The membership will decide, by a vote, which option it wishes to pursue.

Larcade said Warden Carol Puffer has been invited, both verbally and in writing, to attend the meeting and explain the County's position to the Chamber members.

Puffer says she won't be able to attend the meeting because of a prior county commitment, however Stanhope Deputy-Reeve Ann Barker, who is the county's liaison to the Chamber, will be there.

Although money from the County is used for marketing and not for the administration costs, Larcade said the decision to slash the budget has created a cash flow problem.

Because members are late paying their membership fees, Larcade said the money trickles in over the course of the year as opposed to being paid in a lump sum. A table will be set up at Tuesday's meeting and members will be encouraged to pay their fees to allow the Chamber to continue operations.

The directors have drawn up a revised 1991 budget for the Chamber taking into account the county's reduced contribution. Under that budget, Larcade said the Chamber will not be able to do much more than operate the information office on Highway 35 with a single employee.

She said the Chamber will not be able to attend any trade shows or pursue any out-of-county promotional activities.

Not only are the members going to have to decide what role the Chamber should play, but Larcade said the county is going to have to decide what direction it wants to take with promotion of the tourism and travel industry in Haliburton County.

Larcade says the Chamber is already pursuing other potential sources of funding in an effort to allow the organization to continue to fulfill its mandate.

Sir Sandford spreads its classes throughout village

The college rents 2,400 square feet on the second floor of a Main Street building, and 2,800 square feet of industrial space in the village.

This past year, the college has also used a sheet metal shop, a bakery, the kitchen at PineStone Inn, and an airplane hanger at Martin Lumber to house classes with special requirements for equipment.

The campus spends about $55,000 each year within the village.

"This makes for some spectacular juggling of audio visual equipment, desks, chairs, etc. when all the programs mentioned above are in full swing," said Bolin.

Bolin also pointed out that the school recently purchased the Sisco Centre from the Haliburton County Board of Education.

The building still houses students from Victoria Street Public School. "But within a few years, when (the board's) accommodation problems are solved, the building will house more Sir Sandford Fleming College students," she said.

"Until then, we are happy to co-operate with the board, which generously leased the building to us for a dollar a year, for the previous 15 years."

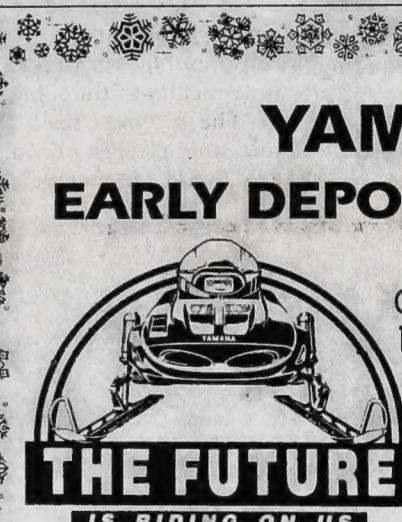

The board also leases property where the campus's eight cottages are located, at a nominal rate.

After the meeting, members of the board met with representatives of Dysart council, Director of Education Stuart Baker, Jane Selbie of the employment centre, Doug Field of the CITC, Anne Larcade of the Chamber of Commerce, Andy Campbell of the Haliburton County Development Corporation, and Rails' End Gallery curator Holly Hutchison for wine and cheese.

SOS members appeal for help with lawsuit costs

The municipality of Laxton, Digby, and Longford has set up a fund to assist a group of parents collect donations to pay for over $14,000 in court costs incurred in a battle to stop closure of five northern schools.

On March 26, the Victoria County Board of Education voted in favour of collecting court costs from members of the Save Our Schools (SOS) committee.

The motion was carried with eight trustees voting for, and four voting against.

Two board members were absent.

In response, Laxton, Digby, and Longford Township Council passed a motion last Tuesday that any donations to assist the parents in paying the court costs could be sent to its municipal office.

These funds will be placed in a trust account called the Northern Dignity Defence Fund.

"We are faced with the burden of raising $14,577.28 because we dared to continue to oppose a decision that would see us lose our community schools," says SOS member Laura Janke.

The committee members will begin fundraising attempts through activities such as baseball tournaments, car washes, and community dinners, says Mary Hartin, another of the group's 14 members.

"But we feel a direct appeal for donations is also necessary," says Hartin.

The court costs were incurred when the committee opposed the board's decision to close elementary schools in Norland, Kinmount, Burnt River, Coboconk and Kirkfield.

Earlier this year, the Supreme Court of Ontario found in favour of the school board.

The originators of the Northern Dignity Defence Fund believe this issue has gone far beyond the closure of their schools.

"The Victoria County Board of Education has used its power to try to intimidate us, and others, from opposing decisions made by government bodies," states a press release from the group.

"We regret that we must now ask for financial contributions to assist us in paying the costs incurred for exercising our fundamental right of freedom of speech and democracy."

Donations may be sent to the Northern Dignity Defence Fund, care of: United Townships of Laxton, Digby and Longford; P.O. Box 70; Norland, Ontario; K0M 2L0; (705) 454-3418.

Haliburton economy boosted by local Sir Sandford campus

by Susan Grober

The local campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College is a significant contributor to the Haliburton economy. Principal Barb Bolin told the college board of governors last Wednesday.

The members of the community who make up full and part-time staff of the campus are paid $175,000 each year in wages, Bolin said when the board met at Haliburton's Norman A. Sisco Centre.

Also, programs this past year paid out $485,000 in wages to support staff, instructors, and students directly involved with contract training programs, she said.

Brian Desbiens, President of Sir Sandford Fleming College, commended Bolin and Haliburton campus staff members.

"They just do a fantastic job here," he said. "They are an instrumental part of this community — they do a marvellous job of providing leadership."

Desbiens said the campus is now fully self-supporting, from a financial standpoint.

But he pointed out problems in attaining funding. Haliburton has similar problems as the north, but northern areas receive 38 per cent funding, said

Desbiens.

He suggested the college back Bolin in fighting the Ministry of Education.

"She's accomplished all this without any support. Maybe we ought to make a case with the ministry to provide funding," Desbiens said.

Ron Walker said it seemed the campus is quite important asset to the community. "An awful lot of people are touched by this," he said.

Bolin outlined the courses, which are provided to the public with no full-time faculty at the school.

"The progress made on this campus is just phenomenal," said Del Facey.

At a time when Canadian citizens have little regard for our federal politicians, the Reform Party has decided to enter the fray.

At a party convention in Saskatoon last weekend, delegates over-whelmingly voted to expand the party into Ontario — a departure from its roots in western regionalism.

The expansion still has to be ratified in a party-wide referendum, but it seems likely that voters in Victoria-Haliburton will be presented with a Reform candidate in the next election.

A local interim riding association has already been formed and its members have been busy selling their agenda and seeking support.

Considering the fact that in the 1988 election, the race in Victoria-Haliburton included six different parties, the Reform Party faces a real challenge in distinguishing itself from the mainstream and fringe parties.

The Reform Party's success in western Canada is based on the notion that the country is being run from Ontario and Quebec, and its stated goal has been to let the west into the federal arena.

It will be interesting to see how the Reform Party can stay true to its western roots without appearing to be anti-Ontario to voters in this province.

It will also be interesting to see how the other parties react to the appearance of the Reform Party, especially the Conservatives, who's policies and platforms most closely resemble those of the Reformers.

Reform leader Preston Manning talks of his party's vision of a "new Canada" and voters should make sure the vision being sold in Haliburton is the same one being sold in Saskatoon and Calgary.

Shooting range is top notch

Editor:

I refer to your April 1, 1991 issue, page 2, under the caption "Council Holds Off Decision on Shooting Range Lease".

It seems to me that the snide remark made by Councillor Bill Valentine - quote "Let them put their money where their bullets are", was uncalled for and irrelevant to the topic being discussed by the council (i.e. the rezoning of the site to recreational (Re 2) which allows for a shooting range.)

I have been an active member of the Marksmen Club since early 1986 and with reference to various documents, which I have retained relative to the club's activities, I can find no evidence that the club has ever acted on the cheap with the lessor.

I am a pensioner in my mid seventies and have enjoyed the hobby of target shooting at various ranges since the days of my youth.

It is my observation as an active member that the supervision of shooting activities and the adherence to regulations at the Haliburton County Marksmen Club range are second to none.

A. Ed Taylor,
Gooderham.

Last March the snow on the ground had gone. This March, 18 cm still around, especially on north side of hills.

Environmental movement recalls Larry, Curly and Moe

doubled to 61,000 beasts. Problem is, that's about twice as high as the reserves can handle. Experts say the elephants are already destroying their own habitat and invading nearby villages in a desperate search for food. Diagnosis: the same experts predict massive imminent elephant die-offs.

Item Three: Environmental authorities in England have done an amazing job of cleaning up the River Thames in a very short time. As a matter of fact, the Thames is now so pristine it's killing dolphins. The newer, cleaner Thames is attracting salmon for the first time in a century and a half. The salmon in turn are attracting dolphins which have swum as far as forty miles inland from the ocean.

Unfortunately, these are salt-water, not fresh water dolphins. Some are dying of diseases caused by lengthy exposure to fresh water.

Some of our ecological blunders are more burlesque than grotesque. Last spring, officials in Riverside County, California, dithered over whether to should spray malathion to kill the Mediterranean fruit fly that was decimating the fruit crops. Were they worried about the effects of the poison on humans in the area? Nope. They feared the spray might harm an endangered species of rats living in the area.

There's nothing sweet about the Exxon Valdez Spill. Thirty-eight million litres of crude oil sliming the rocks and clotting the beaches of Prince William Sound, Alaska. Exxon Co. was caught black-handed, and it must be said, reacted responsibly, turning out its corporate pockets to the tune of $1 billion U.S. for the clean-up.

But an oil spill is not like a coffee splash on the arborite. You can't just whisk it away; the damage is internal and long-lasting. About all you can do is make it look good for the TV cameras.

Which they did. The cleaner-uppers captured and cleaned up nearly 200 sea otters.

At an estimated cost of $80,000 per otter.

The irony is, the sea otter is in no danger of extinction. If they'd let the otters go and ploughed the money into a drunk driving program for captains, Exxon would've been further ahead.

So would Earth.

Awakenings: WHEN KEN ROWDEN CRASHED ON HIS ATV NEARLY THREE YEARS AGO, DOCTORS GAVE LITTLE HOPE FOR HIS SURVIVAL

by Susan Grober

A couple of weeks ago, Ken Rowden gave someone the shock of his life.

It was a nice day, so Rowden went on a fishing trip at Percy Lake with his buddy, Brian Luckie. A man approached Luckie and asked, "Is that Ken Rowden over there? I thought he was dead."

Anyone who saw Rowden after his tragic ATV accident nearly three years ago would be just as surprised to see the 36-year-old man alive today.

June 12, 1988, was the day that would change Rowden's life forever. He and his twin brother, Keith, had been working together laying cement blocks in a basement. The pair decided to take a Sunday off work to ride all-terrain vehicles near Ross Lake in Harburn Township.

Rowden wasn't riding more than 10 minutes before the three-wheel bike wiped out. He landed face down on a rock.

"Every single bone in his face was broken," says his mother, Nell Miscio.

Keith Rowden gave his mother a warning before she went to the hospital.

"He told me to be prepared, because I wouldn't recognize Ken," says Miscio. "I couldn't believe it — he looked like a 350 pound man in the bed because he was all bandaged up. But his name was at the foot of the bed, so I had to believe it was my son."

The accident injured Rowden's head, damaging his brain, and left him paralyzed all down the left side. Doctors said he would be left a vegetable, if he survived at all.

Today Rowden lives in his mother's Minden home, and shows a little progress with each passing day. He talks, and is just learning to walk again with the help of a leg brace and a walker.

"All I can say is it's a miracle," says Rowden.

The people who help Miscio with Rowden are quick to agree. Once a week a physiotherapist visits, twice a week a Homemaker comes in, and an attendant who helps with physiotherapy and life skills comes every afternoon.

They have all seen the changes in Rowden. And they help push him into making more strides toward rehabilitation.

Rush to hospital

After the accident, Rowden was air-lifted to Haliburton Hospital. There, Dr. Karl Hartwick inserted a tube into his throat to allow him to breathe easier until he arrived at the trauma unit at Sunnybrook Hospital.

"The doctors gave us 72 hours, because they didn't think Ken would make it," says Miscio. "His life was on the line. They didn't give us any hope at all for Ken making it through."

Rowden was in a coma for six-and-a-half weeks. During that agonizing time, his immediate family refused to give up hope.

Rowden's mother is a strong believer that people in comas can hear the voices of others.

"We kept on talking to him as if he were awake," says Miscio, who would spend three days a week at Sunnybrook. "Ken's twin brother never stopped telling him he was going to be fine."

Ken Rowden has shown great progress since he's been living with his mother, Nell Miscio, in her Minden home for the past year. His left side was left paralyzed three years ago after an all-terrain vehicle accident.

It was an emotionally exhausting period for Miscio. "I would cry all the way home from the hospital each time, and I dreaded leaving my son behind. I never left the hospital until it closed at 10 at night."

At her home in Minden, she would jump every time the phone rang, fearing it would be bad news.

"I could never wait to get to the hospital to see him, and it was so hard for me to leave," says Miscio. "I was in a terrible state."

One day in mid-July, an amazing thing happened as Miscio stood watch by Rowden's side. He yawned.

"I rushed out to talk to the nurse, and asked if you could yawn when you're in a coma. She said no, and said: 'Come on, you're only hoping he's awake. Go back in there and look again.'"

Rowden yawned again. It was the first, sluggish sign he was to escape the dormant state which had enveloped his body. He was going to make it through.

Progress is slow

On August 2, Rowden was released from Sunnybrook, and went to the rehabilitation centre at Peterborough Civic Hospital.

"Ken was more or less coming out of the coma, still," says Miscio. He was like a baby, learning to do things all over again. "He was just learning to talk — to speak the odd word."

Rowden's face was badly injured in the accident, and he was ashamed to have even his family members look at him.

"He didn't want to see anyone because he thought his face and head looked so bad," says Miscio. "He was okay when he talked on the phone to you, but he would turn his head when you walked into his room."

Since then, Rowden has undergone extensive plastic surgery. "You must have had a wonderful plastic surgeon," Homemaker Levina Lucas tells him. "You look great."

Rowden also had his jaws wired together, and his teeth had to be removed because poisons were building up inside his mouth. Soon he'll get dentures, but now he only eats soft foods.

The following winter, Rowden was sent to Riverdale Hospital, where he began physiotherapy. Rowden had always been left-handed, and it was his left side that was paralyzed.

"He had to be taught everything all over again on his right side," says Miscio. Simple acts such as using a spoon or a toothbrush became new challenges to Rowden.

Rowden was using a wheelchair at that point, and an expensive brace was built to provide stability for his left leg. With the brace and boot strapped on, he leans against a walker and can move around the house.

Judith Creelman of Therapacc is one of the physiotherapists who has worked with Rowden since he came out of Riverdale. "I've seen such a change since then," she says during one of her visits. She turns to Rowden. "You sure weren't walking on your own steam then. You were wheelchair-bound."

It's been an uphill journey to rehabilitation, says Creelman. "It is very slow, because there was lots and lots of damage. Ken's balance was destroyed. But I think he has a lot more confidence to do things now."

Creelman and physiotherapist Nancy Barnes aid Rowden in exercises which both loosen and strengthen his muscles.

These exercises have been so successful that Miscio recently had the leg brace rebuilt to accommodate Rowden's ever-growing muscles.

"He's vastly improved," says Creelman. "It's a tribute to hard work and perseverance."

Acceptance of change

At Riverdale, Rowden was put on medication to treat his depression. It hasn't been easy to accept the great changes in his life. But the people who work with him have seen his outlook getting brighter in recent months.

Brian Luckie is an attendant with Kawartha Participation Projects, a service out of Peterborough. For the past nine months, he has helped Rowden with his physiotherapy each day, and also helps take care of things such as grooming and bathing.

Luckie is also Rowden's friend. They are the same age, and share interests such as fishing and hunting. When he's off-duty, Luckie takes Rowden for drives and they go fishing or to see the deer yards.

"I teach him how to get up on his feet again," says Luckie. "When I first came here, he wouldn't even get up out of his chair. He wouldn't do things for himself. It took him quite some time to accept how the accident left him."

Luckie is proud of Rowden's efforts since then. "He's shown such confidence lately. He needed some friends and family to give him support. Now he's working very hard to get what he likes."

Now, Rowden can get quite cocky at times, and is braver in all his movements with Luckie's help.

"That's all his fault, because he says he'll never let me fall," Rowden says of his burly friend.

Rowden and Luckie enjoy making each other laugh. They often glance at each other with conspiratorial grins when they see a joke in something, but know better than to say it. But now and then, Rowden will crack a joke which

Nominees chosen for awards by Minden figure skate club

The Minden Skating Club has selected their nomination for award for the 1990-91 season and forwarded them to the Eastern Ontario Section. The Section then selected the most deserving for the complete area it represents.

The Minden Skating Club honoured this year's nominees at the Pop Concern on March 24.

Marilyn Ranson was selected as "Volunteer of the Year". Marilyn has spent numerous hours at the arena as Canskate Co-ordinator. She attended faithfully ensuring the Canskate program was operated efficiently. Marilyn has helped to get the Powerskating program initiated in Minden for the improvements in hockey skating skills.

Robin Flood was selected as "Amateur Coach of the Year". Robin was a skater with the club last year decided to willingly volunteer her time to coach the young skaters of the Canskate level. She has been dependable and encourages the young skaters.

This year the Minden Figure Skating Club had a most difficult task in choosing the skater of the year. The qualifications helped to narrow it down to two skaters but how do you pick between two girls born one day apart on opposite sides of the world, who since meeting, have become best friends.

Marita Schrader and Kristi Barkwell have their own special qualities that make them good candidates for Skater of the Year. Both have passed their 2nd Figure, 14-Step and Ten Fox and Marita has her Preliminary Freeskate and Kristi has her Jr. Bronze Freeskate. Both girls skate because they love the sport.

Marita has had a trying year this year, starting at summer school. During a dance lesson, Marita fell but got up and finished her lesson. She continued to skate for another week before giving in to the pain in her left wrist, at which time x-rays proved it broken. Marita continued to skate, cast and all.

Marita works hard especially at freeskate, and as well as skating three nights a week in Minden, she skates one night a week in Lindsay. And if the weather doesn't allow her to get to Lindsay, she takes extra ice in Haliburton.

Kristi's season started off with a real bang. Here is a skater that passed her Preliminary Freeskate at the last test day of the 89-90 season and her second figure at summer, tried and passed her Jr. Bronze Freeskate at fall school and competed at Sectionals in November.

Kristi's busy schedule has her skating three nights a week with piano lessons one night and girls club one night. Kristi's family lives in the village of Kinmount, which is a 10-15 minute drive from Minden and with the weather as unpredictable as it can be, has only missed one night of skating.

Both girls turned 12 in November, 1990. They have a great attitude towards training and will often work together. This year the girls teamed up to dance together at Interclub and won the Sr. Bronze dance title, giving Minden the needed points to win the club trophy. Both Marita and Kristi love to compete and realize that as long as they skate their personal best, no one can ask for more.

They both have a great outlook on life, have a great sense of humour and love to skate. They are there for each other sharing victories and defeats and that is why they cannot be chosen between. They are both deserving candidates for Skater of the Year.

The Minden Skating Club would like to extend special recognition to Marilyn, Robin, Kristi and Marita for all of their contributions that makes our club successful. Congratulations ladies.

Rowden's progress amazes both his doctors and family members

makes his mother blush.

"We're always in trouble, but it's so much fun," says Luckie.

Despite her scolding, it's obvious Miscio is happy to see her son laughing again. And she's thrilled to see him walking.

"It just makes me feel great," she says. "He has gotten much more stable on his feet. I can't tell you the feeling it gives me. It's just marvellous to see the progress he's making."

A neurosurgeon in Peterborough said Rowden was fairly brain damaged. "But there's certainly nothing wrong with his mind," says Miscio.

"There have been such remarkable changes in Ken. His mind seems to be getting brighter. And his memory is better. He can remember things now he didn't remember before. His memory is nearly back to the stage it was before he got hurt."

Miscio always tries to look at the positive side of things. "As Ken says, if it hadn't been for the help from all these people, he'd never have made the friends he has now."

After Rowden was released from Riverdale, a benefit dance was held at the West Guilford Community Centre. And a number of people came forward with donations of food and money to help his family out.

Rowden is also appreciative of the great support he's received from his mother, a strong and dedicated woman who obviously loves her family.

Miscio has taken care of her son since last April. "He was on his way to a nursing home, and I wouldn't have it," she says.

It's been a great relief that there are so many services available for people in their homes, says Miscio. "I just kept phoning and phoning to get Ken involved in everything that was available."

Every two weeks, Rowden eats at the Minden Legion, thanks to Wheels to Meals. But Miscio wishes there was a bus service here like the one in Haliburton so he can get even more mobility.

Nearly every night in the summer, she takes her son fishing at the Gull River. Once the weather warms up, the two will have to do a lot of walking, in accordance with the physiotherapist's orders.

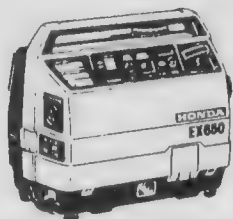

Ken Rowden has come a long way since his accident. He used to work on his own with a skidder in the bush, but his goal now is to drive a cab someday.

Rowden has certainly overcome a number of hurdles already. He doesn't mind when people are surprised to see him alive — he's just as shocked as they are. And he can't wait to see the doctors who treated him in the past and give them the shock of their lives.

"My main concern is to prove all the doctors wrong," he says. "I'd like to walk into the office and tell them who I am. I'd like to tell them I'm the guy who'd never walk again."

Report summarizes county official plan policies

completed, these sites will be addressed in the official plans of the municipalities where the sites are located.

The county plan will include general policies relating to waste management in the county.

The following is a brief summary of some of the areas that will be addressed during the development of the official plan;

Population policies: These policies would encourage the achievement of population goals in both growth and distribution and would allow for changes in population trends to be monitored.

Settlement and development patterns: Areas of urban and semi-urban growth would be identified and policies established to provide for their growth. Policies would also be created to preserve municipal and community identity, especially in the case of county restructuring.

Natural resources and the environment: Provincial policies regarding flood plains, wetlands, fish and wildlife and areas of natural and scientific interest would be translated into the context of Haliburton County. The province will be encouraged to provide flood plain mapping for areas where it does not presently exist. Policies will also be drafted to address water quality and management and environmentally sensitive areas.

Rural resources: Policies would be established regarding forestry, mineral aggregates, agriculture and trapping.

Housing: The section will address the implementation of provincial policies for land use planning for housing and will expand upon the municipal housing statement for Haliburton County prepared in 1989.

Economic policies: These policies would implement the county's Economic Strategy Plan in terms of location, size and servicing of economic activities. Policies will be required to strengthen opportunities for tourism and recreational development throughout the county.

Transportation: This would deal with issues relating to the addition, removal, construction and operation of the county road system and, as required, policies regarding air transportation.

Utilities: Policies will be established for the provision of water supply, sewage disposal and drainage for urban, rural and waterfront locations. Implicit in some instances are matters of municipal responsibility. This section will also address issues relating to the waste management plan.

Health and social services: This section will deal with the delivery of health and social services that are the County's responsibility and encourage adequate provision by other levels of government.

Heritage: Policies will be provided respecting the preservation of historic buildings or sites and archaeological resources. Municipalities will be encouraged to pass by-laws and undertake activities that will enhance the heritage of the county.

Although these issues will be addressed during the development of the official plan, specific policies will only be established in consultation with the municipalities.

County Planner Mark Stagg says the County is not trying to take areas of responsibility away from the municipipalities and local councils will be encouraged to be the prime implementors of policies.

"We're trying to emphasize the potential content of the official plan," he said. "We want to look at it all and then everybody can agree what the county's interests are."

The first discussion paper on the official plan will be prepared by the county staff and ready for public discussion this summer to allow seasonal residents to participate. Public meetings will be held in Dorset, Wilberforce, Minden and Haliburton.

Subdivision policy in the works

A provincial freeze on subdivision development in seven of Haliburton County's municipalities is prompting the County to prepare an interim planning policy.

The Ministry of Municipal Affairs has indicated it is unwilling to process applications for plans of subdivisions in the seven municipalities that don't have their own official plans.

This freeze will continue until the County official plan is adopted and approved, which won't be for at least another four years.

In order to assist these municipalities, County Planner Mark Stagg says an interim planning statement will be prepared on a "fast track" basis to allow subdivision development to continue in accordance with provincial policies.

Developing the interim statement will include input from municipal councils, staff and consultants to ensure it reflects the needs of all seven municipalities, says Stagg.

"It will be a case of the county family working together to help each other," he said. "It has to be general enough to work for all seven municipalities."

Only Dysart et al, Cardiff and Anson, Hindon and Minden have their own official plans.

Stagg said the planning statement will be very straight forward and will not involve any long-term planning policies, which will be covered in the official plan.

Man convicted for sexually assaulting waitress at convention

by Susan Grober

An Ottawa-area man has been found guilty of sexual assault, for rubbing himself against a waitress during a convention two years ago at the PineStone Inn.

Maurice Vincent Cartier, 41, pleaded not guilty to the charge when he appeared before Judge D.R. Timms last Wednesday at provincial court in Minden.

Suzie Blake, 24, worked as a waitress at the PineStone off and on from 1987 to 1990. On August 16, 1989, she was a cocktail waitress at the inn's Golden Slipper Lounge.

Blake testified she was leaning over to clear a table when Cartier put his hands on her waist, pulled her buttocks toward his groin area, and rubbed himself back and forth across her body.

Cartier, a sales representative, was with about 70 others at a four-day convention at the PineStone during that time.

Blake said the group of conventioners had been giving her a hard time during their stay at the inn.

"There was heckling, and razzing," she said. "It was a very rude group in all. They all considered themselves professional businessmen, and I was considered a non-professional."

Blake, who now attends school in London, asked another waitress to continue serving that section, but wanted to clear the table first. That was when the incident occurred, she said.

Later, as she cleared a table in another section, a man commented on the alleged assault, she said. "He said that group was awfully touchy. It made me think again about what happened."

Blake told a security guard and other employees about the incident, and called the police at 1 a.m. when the bar closed. Blake said when she later arrived home, she was so upset about the entire day that she cried.

Cartier testified that Blake was hostile toward his group, and gave them bad service during their stay.

The day before the incident occurred, she was ordered by management to apologize to a man in the group who had complained about her behaviour.

"She just didn't seem to want to serve us at all," he said. "It was difficult to get any kind of service from this waitress."

Cartier didn't feel his fellow conventioners were especially rude. He said the worse they did was chuckle when Blake spilled a drink nearby.

Cartier said Blake ignored his request for a beer that night, so he had to go to the bar and get one himself. He became angry when he overheard her talking with another waitress at the bar, he said.

"What triggered my frustration was I heard her talking about 'That Imperial group of rowdies'," said Cartier.

"She didn't have a place to put us down. If anything, she was the one who was difficult."

Cartier began to argue with Blake, who then turned her back on him, he said.

"We had just had a morning seminar on customer service, and she wasn't interested in what that meant. I grabbed her by the waist, and I moved her to the side (to get a drink)."

Upon later examination, Cartier said he had grabbed Blake because he wasn't finished talking with her.

Crown Attorney Chris Meinhardt pointed out this inconsistency in Cartier's testimony, and said the fact that he touched Blake showed he wanted to put her down.

"After all, she was just a measly waitress, isn't that right?" he asked Cartier. "Why would you get so terribly steamed because she thought your group were less than gentlemen?"

"We were having a little bit of fun, but she didn't seem to have any sense of humour," said Cartier.

Cartier said the other waitresses were pleasant to the group. But Meinhardt said waitresses can take a lot because they rely on tips to make a living.

"I suggest you were taking advantage of your role as patron, and baiting the waitress," said Meinhardt. "You were having fun at her expense."

Cartier then admitted there was enough room at the bar that he could have placed his order without touching Blake to move her.

Defence lawyer Brian Ward said, in accordance with Cartier's testimony, the accused would be guilty of assault level one — the intentional touching of someone without her consent.

Referring to Blake's evidence, Meinhardt suggested Cartier's motive for rubbing against her was to humiliate her, rather than for sexual gratification.

Judge Timms said there wasn't enough doubt in his mind to acquit Cartier, and convicted him of the sexual assault charge.

The judge said Blake's testimony was more believable. "I can imagine it," he said. "I've been to hotels where there have been conventions, and I've seen how they (conventioners) treat people."

Meinhardt suggested a "substantial" $1,000 fine. He said the act didn't appear to necessitate probation.

A pre-sentence report was ordered, and Cartier must return to Lindsay court on May 7 for sentencing.

Public Meeting

Municipal Conflict of Interest Consultation Committee

We want to hear your views to help us improve municipal conflict of interest laws.

Public meetings of a government-appointed consultation committee will be held across the province. The committee will consider all aspects of this subject including such questions as:

- should the Municipal Conflict of Interest Act extend to local government employees?
- should conflict rules extend to gifts and benefits received because of position or office?
- should local politicians be required to disclose significant assets and interests which may create conflicts?
- do the current rules deal adequately with elected officials undertaking additional paid activities?

A meeting will be held at:

Peterborough — Tues. Apr. 23
Peterborough Municipal Offices, 500 George St. North

All meetings commence at 7:00 p.m. and all meeting locations are wheelchair accessible.

Man guilty of assaulting grandfather

A 20-year-old Sherborne man received a suspended sentence and was placed on two years probation after pleading guilty to assaulting his grandfather.

Michael Robert John Derry appeared before Judge D.R. Timms last Wednesday at provincial court in Minden.

Last August 24, Derry was living with his 74-year-old grandfather, John Derry, when the two began arguing in the kitchen as the older man was preparing a cup of coffee.

The argument became physical, said Crown Attorney Chris Meinhardt. Derry threw a flowerpot at his grandfather, and then started pushing and shoving him, said Meinhardt.

Defence lawyer Helen

Johnston said the grandfather was only hit with the dirt from the flowerpot, and that the grandson had no intention of hitting him.

She said the pair were arguing because the younger man was paying no room and board during his stay.

Earlier that morning, Johnston contacted the grandfather, who said he had consumed three "Coffee Royales" before the argument began. Each drink consisted of coffee, cream, Sugar Twin, and two ounces of rye.

Because of bail conditions, no contact has been made between the two men since the incident occurred, she said. Michael Derry now lives in a boarding house.

Meinhardt said a police officer found no evidence of alcohol use upon investigating the incident.

Before the trial, Meinhardt also spoke with the grandfather, who was concerned his grandson would be sent to jail for the offence.

"He was so scared, perhaps he was prepared to bend the truth (about the drinks) on behalf of his grandson," said Meinhardt. He told Michael Derry he should appreciate this gesture.

The grandfather was asked if he would like a non-association condition as part of his grandson's probation, but he declined.

Judge Timms told the accused to watch himself in the future. "You could find yourself in much deeper hot water than you are in today. The results of your action could have been much more serious."

Sir Sandford board meeting

Art school doing fine in recession

by Susan Grober

It seems the Haliburton School of Fine Arts has not been haunted by the recession, Principal Barb Bolin told the Sir Sandford Fleming College board of governors last Wednesday.

Some 800 students have registered in the past month, which is about 140 more than last year at this time, Bolin said at a meeting held at the Norman A. Sisco Centre, Haliburton campus.

In her report, Bolin gave an overview of Haliburton campus activities.

The campus has five full-time staff, and two regular part-time positions, and is best-known for its summer fine arts courses which brings in 1,700 students from across Ontario, she said.

This year, a visual arts diploma was approved to be offered on a part-time basis. "This was the culmination of several years of work, and the start of a mammoth task of administering the program with no full-time faculty to rely on for expertise," said Bolin.

Local staff members are also working with the college on a system where prior arts learning may be assessed to give credit toward this diploma, she said.

"We plan to have these stumbling blocks solved by June and be ready to accept student portfolios for assessment by fall of this year."

Principals fair well in director's review

by Susan Grober

Don't let anyone tell you Haliburton County doesn't have good principals.

According to Director of Education Stuart Baker, the heads of our schools are doing a fine job.

"I'm very impressed with the work the principals are doing overall," Baker told trustees at last week's meeting of the Haliburton County Board of Education.

Baker has been reviewing the principals in the county, and will have a report completed late this week.

In his observations, Baker found the principals to be very hard working. "There's nobody not giving at least 100 per cent, and then some."

Principals must be aware of the overall education environment in the schools, and familiar with the staff and students.

"The principals seem to know their staff very well," said Baker. This means all staff, not just teachers.

Baker said he's amazed at how well the principals know the students in their schools, and how aware they are of individual needs.

The principals did need some guidance on where to make improvements, said Baker. "There are some areas that we're working on."

He said the principals know what areas need extra attention.

"But, for the most part, things are in really good shape in your education system," he said to trustees.

Kids' Korner

by Jean Lacey

Hi Kids!

Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down forward, backward and diagonally. They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters.

Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off the list.

It's as easy as that. Have fun!

Genealogists welcome new member

March 28, 1991, was the date for the local Genealogical group. Carol Miles and June Beeney welcomed the members and a new member, Mr. Henry Chulow from Toronto.

The minutes were read and accepted by and the Treasurer reported all bills paid. Life memberships will be accepted in order to raise funds for planned speakers. The Cemetery Recording Co-Ordinator, Mr. Cec Rowe, reported that the Minden, Mason and Abandoned Pioneer Cemeteries have all been recorded and types and sent to the Kawartha branch of the OGS.

The cemetery at Twelve Mile Lake is the next one to be recorded. It has 200 stone markers and will be recorded as soon as the weather and ground conditions permit. Anyone wishing to volunteer their time is welcome to contact Cec. Elizabeth Mugridge is coordinating the pedigree index of all names being researched by the members. The index is available to look for your connections. In discussing the possibility of including pioneer family names, we were reminded that these would already be recorded in the Tweedsmuir History of the area.

Our fall speaker is to be the noted genealogical author Angus Baxter. The meeting will be Saturday, September 7, 1991. Tickets will be sold in advance.

By next meeting all logo submissions are to be in to the committee to make the final choice on design.

The next meeting will be held on June 27, at Minden Council Chambers. The topic will be "Researching Land Records".

Submitted by Sect. J. Partridge.

It's time for Canadians to celebrate

National Citizenship Week, first proclaimed by the Prime Minister in 1987, is a time for reflection and for celebration for all Canadians—citizens by birth and by choice.

National Citizenship Week coincides with the anniversary of the enactment of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Through the Charter, the values, rights and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship are expressed. Freedom, fairness, equality, and justice are the cornerstones of Canada's political and legal systems. Through these key values, Canadians have further developed the values inherent in Canadian citizenship, such as a respect for human diversity, a sense of responsibility as members of a global community, and a feeling of compassion for those who need our help—both in Canada and in other parts of the world. Canadians recognize that these values, rights, and responsibilities of citizenship are best preserved by the participation of all Canadians—citizens by birth and by choice—in their communities and in the nation as a whole.

Report from Ottawa

With Bill Scott, MP

During National Citizenship Week, Canadians can reflect on what it means to be a Canadian—the rights we enjoy, our responsibility in protecting the rights of all people, and the values which lie at the heart of our heritage and citizenship. Together, Canadians can actively show their commitment to Canada by participating in community events and celebrations during National Citizenship Week.

This year, National Citizenship Week will be celebrated from April 14 through 20 and features the theme "Canadian Citizenship: A Commitment to Our Future". This theme reminds Canadians that, as they celebrate their citizenship together, they can share their visions of Canada's future and can work to make Canada an even better place to live.

If you would like more information about Canadian citizenship, or if you want to find out how you can get involved in National Citizenship Week, contact the nearest Court of Canadian Citizenship (listed in the blue pages of your telephone book) or write to: Citizenship Registration and Promotion, Multiculturalism and Citizenship Canada, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0M5.

Public urged to support Chamber at emergency meeting on budget cuts

Now is the time that your Chamber needs your help. All Chamber Members and those interested in the future of our County are invited to an emergency meeting of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 9th at the Haliburton Legion.

County, by slashing its commitment to the tourism and Marketing Agreement that had existed for the last six years between itself and the Chamber has given the Chamber a devastating blow. Even worse was the

From the Chamber

by Shawn Hagerman

motion that was passed that specifically identified where the County money would be spent. This is the first time that the County, without consultation or input from the Chamber, unilaterally directed where the money was to go. Previously, monies were spent at the discretion of the Chamber after the review and mutual agreement was reached. This expenditure was included in the monthly statement from our accountant to either the County or its representative who sat on our Board. Thus, this motion leaves the Chamber with an immediate cash flow problem. Suddenly, the Chamber cannot meet its ongoing current contractual obligations.

The Board wishes input from the members concerning what kind of Chamber they want. Also, Carol Puffer, Warden of the County, has been formally invited in writing to attend our meeting and explain the County's reason for these cuts to the business community of Haliburton.

The Chamber's vision of this County has been controlled lake front and tourism related developments that would also encourage related service and light non-polluting industries. This is a vision that will best protect our natural environment while providing employment for our area.

We need your support. If you have not paid for your membership yet this year, please, send it in. If you are not a member yet, but believe in that vision, please, consider joining. Finally, come to the meeting and make your opinions heard. This is important.

Volunteer drivers help seniors

by Donna K.M. Pacey,
Executive Director,
Haliburton County Home Support.

Transportation, it is the key to existence in Haliburton County but for many seniors and disabled persons a driver's licence is an impossible dream.

Haliburton County Home Support Services volunteers drivers have helped many seniors and disabled persons to get to doctor's appointments, hospital visits, dentists, etc., and we would like to explain how the program works.

Presently, the drivers charge the client .09 per kilometre or $5.00 minimum charge to take a senior (over 55 years) or disabled person (over 18 years) to a medical appointment, banking or shopping. We have very few drivers, therefore it is important that the client try to get his own transportation through family or friends first, before calling Haliburton County Home Support Services. The charge is to help to cover the gasoline and wear and tear on the car, which most driver's know does not really cover the cost of either. Our drivers are truly "Good Neighbours". We thank them for "taking time to reach out" to the seniors and disabled of Haliburton County and driving over 38,000 kilometres during 1990.

Registration for seniors

(over 55 years) wishing to participate in swimming for nine weeks, beginning April 30 to July 2 at the PineStone Inn, will take place at Haliburton County Home Support on Friday, April 19 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. For further information please call Sherron Sisson at (705) 457-2171.

Residents enjoy movie about ape's pet kitten

Saturday, March 23, Marian Fisher came to read for us for an hour. Thank you Marian, we love to hear you read.

Sunday, chapel service was taken by Rev. Burgess who had a very inspiring service with Alice Jones at the organ. Thank you both very much.

Monday, Evelyn Coleman came for bible study. She has been talking about three parables, the lost sheep and the prodigal son. Evelyn will be away for the next three weeks so we won't have bible study until she comes home again.

Monday was the March Auxiliary meeting. With so many taking spring break the attendance was down, but we had a good meeting.

The movies were "Enchanted Isles", "Koko's Kitten" and "A Terribly Strange Bed". Koko was a big black ape a doctor had taught to talk. It had a kitten it loved. The movies were shown by Pat Bradburn.

Rev. Brian Parker of the Anglican Church, Minden, conducted the service Tuesday morning and also a

Senior League

by Winnifred Barnum

Communion Service and we thank him very much.

Tuesday afternoon Terry Barnum drove the bus so we could take an outing. We drove down Highway #35 to the Fenelon Falls turn and we returned by Burnt River and Kinmount to Kawartha Dairy for ice cream and then home. Linda and Cindy were our helpers. It was a lovely day for a drive.

Wednesday, Betty Herlihey came to read to us in Marian Fisher's place. Marian was unavoidably detained. We enjoyed her reading and thank her very much.

As usual, Thursday was Tea Party and it was provided by the ladies of the Lioness Club of Minden who were: Georgina Kernohan, her daughter Meghan, Joyce Wright, Edna and George Moulton. We had a delicious lunch. The ladies brought a lovely birthday cake. It was too bad we only had one birthday lad and he was away that day.

To conclude the party, we held the draw for turkeys.

Mary McKelvey drew May Cooper's name and as Pearl Lyle was absent, Winnie Barnum drew in Pearl's place and she drew Carol Francis' name, granddaughter of Pearl. We thank the ladies greatly for the tea party.

Today being Good Friday, we have had many visitors. I'm sure the residents who had visitors were very happy to see them.

The residents are sorry to hear that Rev. John Burgess is in the hospital in Peterborough and our own Alfie Richardson is in Minden Hospital. We certainly wish them both speedy recoveries.

Thursday evening was bingo and Sue Ripley and daughter Cheryl were here to assist Marg Prentice. We sincerely thank them.

Reduce roadkill with careful driving

Spring is a time of renewed wildlife activity in our area. White-tailed deer are more conspicuous as they move from wintering areas to summer range. Migratory birds are returning from wintering grounds. Animals like bears, raccoons and woodchucks are becoming more active after a long period of inactivity. Others, like beaver and muskrat, are beginning to disperse to new territories. The unfortunate result of all this movement can be death on our roads and highways.

"Every spring I see deer, raccoons, beaver, squirrels, all kinds of wildlife lying dead by the side of the road," says Stan Flemming, Fish & Wildlife Supervisor in Minden. "I really think we can reduce the number of roadkills by being more watchful and anticipating areas where wildlife cross roads."

Ecologically speaking, wildlife disperse in the spring to spread themselves around the landscape, taking up areas left vacant due to overwinter mortality. Animals seek new feeding areas or sites for nesting or breeding. This search may take them across many roads. "Wildlife are generally oblivious to the dangers of roads," says Stan, "it's up to us to be vigilant when we drive roads in the area."

According to Mike Buss, the MNR Wildlife Ecologist in Huntsville, there are some obvious areas to watch. Wetlands and lush riparian areas around streams are rich wildlife habitats. They are also natural corridors travelled by wildlife on a regular basis. "I look at stream crossings and marshy areas as wildlife highways," says Buss, "when I approach one I prepare myself for some creature to come cruising across the pavement. The early hours of the morning and at dusk are especially busy times."

Deer crossing or moose crossing signs are also good early warning signals that wildlife hazards exist on our roads. These signs were erected because animals consistently cross at these locations and accidents had already occurred there.

There are obvious human hazards inherent in these collisions, as well as considerable property damage.

Water shortage underlines need to protect environment

Going into the fifth consecutive year of drought, California is suffering a severe shortage of water.

Governor Pete Wilson's response was to set up a $100-million emergency fund. But as weather and climate fluctuate erratically, Californians will find that money will never substitute for their air, water, soil and food that keep us alive and healthy. "Conventional" economics today virtually drives us to destroy the environment.

Suppose an ancient forest increases its total volume of wood fiber by four per cent annually. The ecological "services" an intact forest performs—cleansing the atmosphere, storing water, modulating climate, preventing erosion and supporting wildlife—are not accounted for in the economy. As a result, it makes economic sense to clearcut (foresters correctly say "liquidate") the forest as quickly as possible because the money earned from selling the timber can be banked or invested and will grow by 10-15 per cent.

Economists tell us a strong economy is necessary to pay for a clean environment. But without a clean environment, we won't be around, and there can't be an economy. Economics must be adapted to the ecological realities of the planet—not the other way around.

Economists and politicians claim strong growth in economics of the industrialized countries is necessary to afford to help the poorer nations. Yet the rich countries, with only 20 per cent of the planet's population, consume 80 per cent of its resources. As a result, our consumption is the primary cause of global ecological destruction, therefore we have to reduce our impact and free resources for the poor nations by cutting back on consumption.

Since the 1950s, the world has undergone an unprecedented period of industrialization and economic growth. Yet in the period of high growth between 1968 and 1978, the wealthiest 20 per cent of the world gained "67 times" as much in income as the bottom half.

If the developing world continued to increase its per capita wealth at the 1973-85 rate of 4.6 per cent per year, they would need 100 years to reach the current levels in industrialized nations. And if the rich countries grew "only" at three per cent in the same time, we would be consuming and producing "16 times" as much as we do now, while total world output would have grown "twentyfold".

The United Nations-appointed commission on economics and the environment chaired by Norway's Prime Minister, Gro Harlem Brundtland, released its report in 1987 as Our Common Future. The document described the global ecocrisis and the grotesque disparities between rich and poor countries (13 million people in Orange County, California, consume more resources than one billion people on the Indian subcontinent).

Sadly, the Brundtland Report went on to accept the preposterous notion that continued economic growth in industrialized countries is critical for the Third World, and projected yet another round of economic growth that could lead to a "fivefold" increase in global wealth. Can you imagine having and using "five times" as much of everything?

As Californians are discovering, human intellect cannot endlessly find new resources or create alternatives because the earth is "finite". Disproportionate, unsustainable growth in the "rich" countries is destroying the planet.

And to what end is such growth necessary? Not to achieve goals such as social justice, equality, sense of community, meaningful work or a clean environment. Instead, we think growth is necessary because it has become our definition of progress. Surely we need to define more worthy values, goals and priorities.

Brundtland's report contained the phrase "sustainable development", which has been embraced by business and government because it promises the best of all world—continued economic "development" (which most interpret to mean "growth") and protection of the environment.

But as long as development is synonymous with economic growth, "sustainable development" is a cruel oxymoron.

California reveals the consequences of living beyond the "carrying capacity" of the environment. By polluting air, water and soil and importing fresh water, the state has maintained an illusion of wealth that is rapidly being exposed by smog, polluted beaches, tainted food and water shortages.

So let's keep "sustainable" and drop the "development."

Friends of Algonquin Park aims to raise $4 million

Algonquin Park, Ontario's first provincial park, will be 100 years old in 1993. Known around the world, Algonquin Park is enjoyed by about 500,000 visitors each year.

To celebrate the 100th Anniversary, The Friends of Algonquin Park has undertaken to raise $4 million dollars to help fund new interpretive and recreational facilities in the park.

Established in 1983, The Friends of Algonquin Park is a non-profit charitable organization which has as its objective the enhancement of educational, interpretive and recreational facilities and programs in Algonquin Park.

"Millions of people have been enthralled by Algonquin Park and the feeling in creates is fondly passed from generation to generation. Algonquin Park has provided wonderful memories for visitors and so it is not surprising that people wanted to give something back. That is how The Friends got started," said Bill Calvert, Chairman of the Board of Directors.

"In the past few years,

The Friends has contributed over $639,000.00 to enhance educational and recreational facilities and programs in the park. This fundraising campaign is really nothing new in terms of what The Friends is doing except that it is on a larger scale because of the Centennial of the park," said Calvert.

The Friends operates as a Co-operating Association under an agreement with the Ministry of Natural Resources. Funds raised will be used to assist with the construction of Centennial projects such as the new Visitor Centre, Logging Museum and interpretive trails.

"Leading up to the Centennial in 1993, the Ministry of Natural Resources is investing over $10 million dollars in new facilities, renovations and resource protection projects. We are pleased that the Ministry of Natural Resources has accepted our offer to assist with the projects," Calvert said.

The Chairman of The Legacy for the Future fundraising campaign is Frank Miller, former Premier of Ontario. "We invited Mr. Miller to serve as fundraising Committee Chairman because of his long involvement with the park in a variety of capacities and his experience with public and private sector co-operative partnerships. We are delighted that he accepted our invitation and with the team of men and women volunteers he as recruited to assist with the campaign," said Calvert.

The new Visitor Centre, Logging Museum and interpretive trails are under construction and will be opened to the public in 1993 as part of the Centennial Celebration. The interpretive, educational and recreational facilities and programs in Algonquin Park are noted for their standard of excellence throughout the world.

"People have had their lives enriched by experiences in Algonquin Park and businesses have benefitted greatly from the economy stimulated by the park. We are simply creating an opportunity for individuals, corporations and others to give something back to Algonquin Park," said Miller.

As part of the fundraising program, corporations and organizations are being invited to sponsor exhibits in the new Visitor Centre and Logging Museum. An information package about the opportunities has been sent to a wide variety of corporations and interest groups.

Anyone wanting more information about the fundraising program or wishing to contribute should contact The Friends of Algonquin Park, Box 248, Whitney, Ontario, K0J 2M0.

Report certain roadkills

Losing a deer or moose to a road accident is also tragic. But if one is killed, the driver can claim the animal for his or her consumption. If you do acquire a road killed black bear, deer or moose and wish to keep the carcass, you must report the acquisition immediately to the local Ministry of Natural Resources Office. In Minden call (705) 286-

1521. A free permit will be issued for possession of the animal. If you call after hours or on a weekend, please leave your name, address and telephone number on the answering machine and someone will get back to you.

"It is an interesting twist of ecology that turkey vultures, prominent bird in this region, are here partly because of the number of deer roadkills," says Buss.

Turkey vultures were uncommon in this region until this century, when the number of deer and other wildlife carcasses in open areas such as highways provided them with a ready food source."

"I've got nothing against turkey vultures," says Mike. "They are great ecological janitors. But I really think we should be more vigilant and reduce the number of roadkills on our highways."

IN MEMORIAM

WRIGHT, SHARON-LYNN
- who passed away April 11, 1989.

Dear Sherry,
Beautiful memories are wonderful things
They last till the longest day
They never wear out—they never get lost
And can never be given away.
To some you may be forgotten
To others a part of the past,
But to me who loved you and lost you,
Your memory will always last.
Love, Herb.
